Standard Oil Laboratories Develop New Motor Fuel

Motorists throughout the south will be interested in the announcement of W. E. Smith, president of the Standard Oil Company Incorporated in Kentucky, at Louisville, that a brand-new type of motor fuel will be sold by Standard Oil Company dealers and service stations effective Saturday of this week.

This new motor fuel, which will be colored orange and marketed under the well-known name of Crown Standard gasoline, was developed in the Standard Oil laboratories. It will be a more powerful fuel, with actual added anti-knock properties, but will be sold at no additional cost.

Jinky Fan No. 12,320

Here is David Savini, 225 DeGress avenue, a Boy Scout of Troop No. 35, who is one of the most enthusiastic young boys contestants. David says, "The other Boy Scouts of Atlanta better watch out, 'cause I'm out to win that pup tent and army cot that's being offered for the best Jinky cut by a Scout." David also said that he is going to start his entire troop cutting Jinkys and entering them in the contest.

More Than 325,000 Jinky Receipts Received at Arcade Headquarters

By THE JINKY EDITOR.
Well, at last we have finished counting the Jinky receipts. I almost despaired of getting them counted this week, but by working far, far into the night the task was completed. I won't even ask you to try to guess how many there were. I'll tell you, 326,000! If you don't think that is a lot of receipts I'll be glad to let you count them over again.

I want to thank you for remembering about those pins. Hardly anyone planned their receipts together and the Jinky girls sang a psalm of praise to thoughtful Jinkys. When the receipts were clipped together or bound with a rubber band it facilitated the counting considerably.

The list of those having entered the most Jinkys is ready to be announced tomorrow and I know how anxiously it is being awaited. There were so many people who had entered large numbers that it was difficult to give only the first twenty-five. I did hold myself down to 27, however, if the Jinky fans kept entering them as they did this past week I will have to give a longer list.

This coming Wednesday is the day on which you may get 250 free Jinky receipts by entering at least one Jinky cut on paper from the official Jinky stores. Visit these stores and ask for the paper. A list of the official Jinky stores will be found elsewhere in the paper. Clip it and put it in your bag to refer to while shopping. Each of these Jinkys must be accompanied by ten Jinky receipts. Remember to ask for your Jinky receipts when shopping.

I have another surprise for you on which you may begin working next Thursday. I can't tell you as yet about it, but I can say this much: If you will be all set to get to work. If you will aid you in entering more Jinkys as well as increasing your entries for the two free trips to Chicago. Watch the paper for my announcement and the paper for my announcement and the paper for my announcement and the paper for my announcement.

Just follow along with me I promise that you will get more fun from this contest than any you have ever participated in before.

BEYOND the DOOR

by Carol Brown

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Frederick Von Veb is stabbed to death in his top floor studio at Breat, head of an art firm; Mathewson, another artist, and Sprague, Von Veb's nephew, chat outside his door after leaving him alone. The day they learn later is Virginia screams and cries in the darkness. Marat says he had two daggers like he surmised that the murderer thrust his blade into Von Veb's disheveled fireplace and that it fell down the flue. Marat carefully preserves a long finger nail he finds in Quirt's waste basket. Planning to question Virginia, Marat makes an opportunity on a rainy night to take her home in a taxi. At her door a woman with a faint smile addresses him as Sabenza. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

minutes. There's a railroad station across the interurban tracks and up that little hill. A 10-minute walk . . . I'll take you over there. You're to get on the train and go to Chicago. I have two hundred dollars for you. I just drew it from the bank.

"Oh, it's all right," as she raised a protesting hand. "You can make it up to me afterwards, if that'll make you feel any better about it. But you must get out now. Let me know where you are. Do you know Chicago?" She nodded. "Then write me from there tomorrow—tomorrow, Virginia. I must know if you're all right."

"I couldn't stand it—it!"

Virginia interrupted him. "Wait—just a minute! I will. I'll go! I will. But I want to go up to Smith's house first and telephone Anusha, my old nurse. It'll take just a minute."

"You can't do that," Manning protested. "What if someone else knows you were going there? They mustn't know you're here. That's why I met you here on the train. You must go now. I'll phone Anusha."

"No," she was stubborn. "I must tell Anusha."

"I'll phone her that you're gone. I promise to tell her," he offered impatiently.

"No," she insisted. "There is a message—I must deliver a message. I want her to have it before I go. I want to know she has it."

"Then I'll do it for you now," he suggested. "You wait here and I'll go up and phone your message. What is it?"

She hesitated. "Well—tell her—tell her . . . She stopped and seemed to be wording it. "Tell her I've gone away—that I'm all right. And that—that I want her to mail that letter to Papa Marat. Tell her that."

"To Papa Marat?" he began, but realizing the necessity for haste he waived explanations.

"Step back here under the trees," he said. "I'll hurry back."

But he hesitated. He was afraid to leave her—even for a few moments. He had a curious feeling that he was saying good-bye to her now.

He took a few steps toward the house, then turned to look at her, as though he were fixing a picture in his mind. The sunlight coming through the leafy branches cast checkered patches of gold on her hair and on her dress. There was a golden light in her eyes, deep and clear. Her mouth was very sweet.

He strode back to her and took her in his arms. Quite naturally her arm slipped around his neck. For a second time he stood still. Everything else in the world ceased to be. Then he felt her stiffen in his arms. She drew sharply away from him. It was as though a veil had been drawn across the clearness of her eyes.

"No," she said sharply. "No!"

Queer how the words seemed to dance in the air before him as he trudged up the soft, muddy road toward the house. Queer how, with the stress and hurry of the present moment, with danger lurking so close at hand, with newly laid plans and fresh settling in the foreground of his mind, his thoughts could turn back to something Virginia had said two nights before in the darkness of a taxi as they rode through the rain: "There are only two men I would kiss—one that I loved and one I hated."

He found the two Smith children in the front yard. "Daddy," was in the studio at the back of the house. He told them not to disturb him, went to the telephone in the hall and called Virginia's home number.

When the soft clipped voice answered, he asked, "Anusha?"

"Da," the voice said. "yes, yes."

"This is Manning Colby. I'm with Virginia. She wants me to tell you that she's leaving."

He heard a quick intake of breath at the other end of the wire. "She's all right," he went on. "She wants me to tell you to send the letter to Papa Marat—she wants . . ."

YANKIES LOSE LEAD; BROWNS WIN NIGHTCAP

New York Splits Twin Bill, Winning 10-6 and Losing 5-4.

ST. LOUIS, June 23.—(AP)—The New York Yankees' defense cracked in the eighth inning of the second game today and tumbled the world champions down into second place in the American league as two errors enabled the Browns to win the second half of a double-header, 5 to 4, after the Yanks had taken the opener, 10 to 6.

Two New York errors played a big part in St. Louis' three-run rally that decided the second game. They came after Charley Ruffing had weakened and granted a walk and two doubles that tied the score. Tony Lazzeri fumbled Muddy Ruel's grounder and let Oscar Melillo, who had driven in the tying runs, reach third. Lazzeri threw to third in an effort to catch the runner napping and Joe Sewell let the ball go through him and the winning run scored.

The even break in the twin bill, coupled with Washington's victory over Chicago, dropped the Yanks a half game behind the Senators in the pennant race. The Senators had been tied with New York.

The Yanks had little difficulty winning the opener. They hammered George Blaeholder from the hill with a six-run outburst in the third inning and "counted" in although they were out, 15-13. Babe Ruth walloped his sixteenth home run of the season in the fourth frame off Dick Cuffman's delivery to finish in a Yankees scoring for the game. Bill Dickey hit for the circuit in the big scoring frame with one on, and Bruce Campbell hit his tenth homer for the Browns in the eighth.

New York started off well in the second game, rolling up a four-run lead in the fourth, but Sam Gray checked them with fine relief pitching while Ruffing's wildness proved costly.

The Fates Have a Hand in Golf Tournaments!

Golf as she is played—
Let's see. There was Ralph Redmond, the Irish lad with the broad shoulders and the arms like those of the village smithy—

Every tournament in golf finds some fellow designated beforehand by the old Presbyterian doctrine of predestination. Every tournament is in the bag if we only knew it. They are all framed up by the giggling gods who yank the strings on us puppets in the game of life. And that is why repeating is so rare in the game of golf. Each tournament finds some fellow all steamed up.

In the southern it appears to be Ralph Redmond. The St. Petersburg (Fla.) boy is going along in fine fashion. Earle Stokes, the Louisville dark horse, may get him. But it looks as if the giggling gods had pulled the strings for Redmond.

Take a look at his morning round. He was playing Gene Vinson, the Mississippi boy and one of the favorites.

They were all square at nine holes. And then look—

Redmond won the tenth in a par four.

They halved the eleventh in par three.

He won the next one with a birdie three.

They halved the next in birdie fours.

They halved the next in birdie fours.

The 15th is a long one, 505 yards. Redmond was on in two. That in itself is great golf. His putt for an EAGLE three hit the back of the cup and bounced out. He dropped his second one for a birdie four.

On the 16th he holed out a birdie three to close out the match.

That's heat—real heat—and something has to touch a fellow to do that. No matter how great a golfer one may be—he does those birdies in a row only when something has touched his clubs—one of the Irish gods.

ANOTHER THEORY SMASHED.

Ralph Redmond has smashed another theory.

Come to think of it, this has been a tough tournament for your old partner. It was Charley Hall, the Birmingham professional, who smashed the first one.

"Let's have all the publicity possible for the young players," said Charley. "It's all a lot of bunk about their game being ruined by premature publicity. They've either got it or they haven't. If publicity ruins them they are lucky. They find out early they haven't got it instead of waiting 10 or 15 years. Publicity is fine. Turn on the spotlight. They either have it or they haven't."

That was the first one. Ralph Redmond smashed another yesterday. He is 34 years old. He has been playing golf just a little more than six years. This smashes all to bits the theory that to become a champion, even a southern champion or a southern tournament finalist, one should have started when he was a mere infant.

Redmond was about 28 years old before he began to play. I asked him about it yesterday. His first answer was good.

"How long have you been playing?" I asked.

"Long enough to be broke," he said.

"Well," said your reporter, "a lot of us who haven't played golf are that way."

"Well," he said, "golf is a short cut."

But here he is—a finalist in the southern. And the southern is a very respectable tournament. And Billy Howell, who was defeated by Redmond in the semi-finals, once carried Francis Ouimet to the 35th hole in a national amateur.

He is built for the game. I don't think I ever saw a man who played as much with the arms as does Redmond.

Usually the arms will make a man press. But Redmond uses just his arms (his pivot is almost negligible) and busts the ball high, wide and handsome. He plays a lot like Soccer Coe, the writer, and one of my favorite people.

AN IRISH LINE.

Gee, but it is a swell line. The Irish, God rest them, are wonderful people.

It was just yesterday. We were standing around Mr. Cohen's place talking with a couple of boys from the old country. And they were telling about an Irishman who was bidding a friend goodbye as he started on a long journey.

"Goodbye," said he, "and may ye be 40 years in Heaven before the devil finds ye there."

THE CRACKER CAST-OFFS.

Climax Blethen, cast off by the Crackers, is now one of the league's leading pitchers with Knoxville. But a lot of fans are still wondering why he couldn't pitch for Atlanta. Bunny Hearn, the left-hander who was let go early, is pitching for Williamsport in the N. Y.-P. league and winning. But the N. Y.-P. league isn't so warm. The Southern is the toughest of all the minor leagues.

The split season is already assured. There never was any doubt about it. All the boys wrote about it and the moguls, so-called, laughed at all the publicity. But the league is already split and will open up on June 27 with a brand-new race. It's all right IF the owners of weaker clubs strengthen. And the Crackers can go along if they bear down as they did against Birmingham. The trouble is, the Crackers don't always bear down.

The split season will find fans sitting on their hands waiting to be shown. They will know if the split season is a sham or if it is the real McCoy. The league will do itself a great deal of harm if it does not insist that the weaker clubs strengthen for the second half.

Cracker owners are looking at their property with knowing eyes. It would not be surprising to see something happen. Other club owners are girding for the race. It's a great idea to split the season—if the weaker clubs are given some strength.

THE MEMPHIS GAMBLE.

Memphis gambled when Joe Hutcherson was sold to Brooklyn in exchange for Catcher Clyde Sukeforth and Outfielders Hank Leiber and Murray Howell.

Had the three players reported and gone well for the club all would have been well. But Sukeforth will not report. He is said to be in poor condition. Howell is no sure bet and Leiber is an unproved product. The dice look like snake eyes.

The Chicks may have sold out their star and got very little in return. Memphis isn't a cinch to win. The pennant is yet unmortgaged. The Crackers have a chance in the second half—if they will get down to business and play baseball.

DUNLAP LOSES SEMI-FINALS TO VETERAN 4-3

Defeat of American Astonishes Gallery at British Amateur.

HOYLAKE, England, June 23.—(AP)—A bewildering two-day battle for the British amateur golf championship brought defeat today to the favorite, George T. Dunlap Jr., of New York, and Cyril Tolley, the massive Englishman, leaving in their stead two Scotch country gentlemen to play 36 holes tomorrow in the final round for the historic trophy.

To the complete astonishment of both the gallery and the 24-year-old American youngster, the Honorable Michael Scott, 55-year-old scion of a famous family, bowled Dunlap over, 4-3, in the semi-final round after the New Yorker had staged a remarkable parade through seven straight rounds seeking a title only two American homebreds, Jess Sweetser and Bob Jones, have won.

At the same time Thomas Arundel Bourn, dual veteran of many a title fray, methodically pushed Tolley aside by the tight Scotch margin of one up in 20 holes. The two upsets astounded the gallery of 3,000 that swarmed the famous sea links of the Royal Liverpool Club, expecting anything but the upspring of the old guard.

BRIGHT GOLF.

Scott put on a brilliant display to beat the slender little American who weakened just enough in the afternoon round to lose a pair of holes to a four-hole deficit and was eliminated before the veteran's inspired play.

An eagle three on the long eighth hole where Scott's second shot landed within eight yards of the cup and sank the putt, brought the Scotsman even after an early two-hole disadvantage, shook Dunlap's confidence, and provided the turning point of the match.

Dunlap was away to a splendid start, picking up a hole at the second, where Scott needed three putts, and a hole at the fifth, where he pulled Scott out of the eagle, pulled Scott out of the eagle, pulled Scott out of the eagle.

A great upset shot gave Scott a half on the ninth and he quickly applied the finishing thrusts as Dunlap pulled Scott out of the eagle, pulled Scott out of the eagle, pulled Scott out of the eagle.

At the time the series was arranged Sarazen held the British and United States open championships, hence Compton figured the winner could lay claim to the title "world's best golfer." But he overlooked Johnny Goodman, present United States open titleholder, and Bobby Jones.

With side bets totaling approximately $2,500, Sarazen got off to a bad start today in his opening match.

At the turn he led the Briton, two up, but on the second round he slumped.

Sarazen owed his lead in the early round chiefly to superior putting on the somewhat slow greens.

On the afternoon round Compton blazed his way to victory on two of the first three holes. Then he took the undisputed lead by capturing the 4th.

At this point Sarazen's game went to pieces and Compton rolled off four in a row to take a lead of four-up.

DEEPER SAVANNAH PROJECT OKAYED

Army Engineer Chief Favors $1,775,000 Expenditure for 6-Foot Channel.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(P)—A six-foot channel, 130 feet wide, in the Savannah river, between Augusta and Savannah, was recommended today by Major General Lytle Brown, chief of army engineers.

Establishment of the channel would necessitate the construction of a dam at New Savannah bluff, 12 miles below Augusta.

The cost was estimated at $470,000, which added to the expense of a navigation project existing there would bring the total to $1,775,000.

General Brown refused to recommend a plan to make the channel nine feet deep and construct a lock and dam at Rifle cut, nine miles below Augusta.

Advices from Augusta said most of the work below that city would consist of building jetties and dredging the channel.

Mayor W. D. Jennings said General Brown's recommendation meant a "commercial renaissance" and the Augusta traffic bureau predicted the establishment of new jobbing houses there. Cotton men said Augusta probably would become an inland port for cotton shippers.

The district engineer estimated that 600,000 tons of sugar, canned goods, cotton and cotton textiles, petroleum products and other commerce would be moved on the river annually if the channel was constructed, at a saving in transportation costs of $751,000. This tonnage would compare with 1929, a peak year, of 154,000 tons shipped on the river.

The division engineer disagreed with these figures, however, and placed the total savings at $500,000.

109-Year-Old Negro Asks Pork for Dinner

MACON, Ga., June 23.—(P)—Phil Towns, who has records to show he was born in 1824, is going to celebrate his 109th birthday Sunday and no gift would please him more than a piece of pork to barbecue for dinner.

The old negro came to live in this locality when there were only a few houses in the settlement that grew to be the city of Macon.

Sunday is going to be a big day. Friends have promised that pork, his favorite dish, will be on the table in abundance. But aside from that they are going to have the annual foot washing at the Garfield Baptist church and Phil Towns boasts he will be among the first of the worshippers to get shoes off.

REVIEWING THE SHOWS

Free Ice Cream, Cake
For Erlanger Patrons

Ice cream and cake, furnished respectively by Southern Dairies and the Dutch Oven Bakery, will be furnished patrons at the Erlanger theater's matinee performance today of "Fighting Friends." This production by the Peruchi Players, which has turned the theater into an incubator of laughs for the entire week, will be presented twice today, the matinee at 2:30 and a night show at 8:30.

Seats go on sale this morning at 10 o'clock for next week's revival of "Sis Hopkins," the famous old-time rural comedy-drama which brought fame and fortune to Rose Melville a generation or two ago. The Peruchi organization is giving it an elaborate production, complete with old style costumes and with various groups of singers interpolating the famous old songs—not omitting "Sweet Adeline"—during the play. Walter Sheats and his musicians and singers will also be in the pit, in appropriate costumes, entertaining between acts.

There is no advance in prices for the "Sis Hopkins" revival.

Sylvia Sidney Starred
On Paramount Screen

Sylvia Sidney is starred in the film version of Theodore Dreiser's "Jennie Gerhardt," which starts at the Paramount theater today. She plays the title role, with Donald Cook, Mary Astor, H. B. Warner and Edward Arnold heading the supporting cast.

"Jennie Gerhardt" is the story of a girl who, as the result of her beauty and attraction for men, is caught by forces far too strong for her to battle. But she is, at the same time, a girl who sacrifices everything for the man she loves.

Her first contact with life comes when an elderly senator, deeply impressed by her naive and charming ways, courts her. The senator promises marriage on his return from Washington, but is killed in a railroad wreck. Their child is born.

Jennie gets work as a maid to a wealthy woman, and the latter's brother is attracted to her. This time Jennie knows real love, and their next few years are blissfully happy. But when she discovers she has a child, his attitude undergoes a change.

Georgia Has Thriller
in "Zoo in Budapest"

"Zoo in Budapest," reported as one of the most unusual pictures ever portrayed on the screen, opens a three-day engagement at the Georgia today. It is the first independent production by Jesse L. Lasky under the banner of Fox Films.

The story, built around the activities and atmosphere of a great zoological park, deals with the romance of a young man who has lived all his life among the animals, and a simple, unsophisticated orphan girl who comes to the zoo for a lesson in natural history. The two meet and, drawn by an unknown urge, find themselves strangely in love with each other. But back of this gentle theme of young love lies the terrifying pattern of a young man's life, his hates and hungers, their loves and lusts, the source from which the plot gains its momentum and is said to move from one overwhelming truth to another.

"Zoo in Budapest" features Loretta Young and Gene Raymond. The supporting cast headed by O. P. Heggie, is a notable one. It includes the brilliant, Paul Fix, Murray Kinell, Raulo, Roy Warren, Roy Stewart, Francis Rich and several others.

Tonight between 8 and 10 p. m., uniformed attendants from a large garage will be stationed in front of the Georgia theater for the purpose of parking any patron's car who desires this service.

Rialto Has Feature
Of Dramatic Power

"Ann Carver's Profession," the highly praised and long awaited study in modern matrimony, opens its week's run at the Rialto theater today. With Fay Wray in the star role giving a splendid account of herself in her first really intelligent role, and with Gene Raymond excellent as her chief support, the picture is a magnificent piece of entertainment. It is one of the outstanding Columbia productions of the year.

Directed by Eddie Buzzell, the picture is a brilliant story with the theme that of recurring question of modern life: "Can a woman have a career and a happy married life at the same time?" Miss Wray, as Ann Carver, is a law graduate happily married to a young architectural draftsman early in the story. Her longing to practice her own profession leads her into quick fame and wealth as a trial lawyer, however, only to find that her success has been her home and lost her the happiness she once knew in the love of her husband.

How circumstances lead the unhappy couple out of their discontent, back to the sunny years of happy home life forms a plot that rivals anything yet done on the screen for its sustained interest and dramatic power. It is unquestionably one of the big pictures of the year.

A good selection of short subjects completes the program which will run through Friday, next.

"When Ladies Meet"
Breezy, Entertaining

"When Ladies Meet" is an intriguing example of that rare and very precious theatrical alloy, sterling comedy happily blended with drama. In less involved metaphor, this week's feature at the Grand is thoroughly refreshing entertainment on a light stage.

Taken from Rachel Crothers' story, this piece has some of the breeziest lines to find their way to the screen this year. Some of the dialogue is a bit obvious but it certainly is what it lacks in originality it certainly makes up in timeliness.

A single situation rather than any closely knit plot forms the meat of this dish. A young woman novelist falls deeply in love with her publisher who is married to a charming woman whom he neglects. Through the machinations of the writer's unattached admirer, wife and mistress—in spirit only—meet and the results provide some really interesting moments with the issue showing no little discernment on the part of Miss Crothers.

Ann Harding does what to this reviewer is her most appealing work since "Holiday," and she never has been more ornamental than she is in this role of a neglected wife. Myrna Loy contributes some fine work in her role as the young novelist. Some of the most interesting moments with the issue showing no little discernment on the part of Miss Crothers.

A cartoon, color-music short and newsreel complete the program. And as you enter have a look at the latest word in usher's attire. White linen mess jackets, dress trousers and the proper fittings make the seat-finders the best dressed men in the house these nights. —LEWIS HAWKINS.

NANCY PAGE

The Machine Sews the Rag Rug Strips
BY FLORENCE LA GANKE.

Then Mrs. Garrett, of Northfield, Ohio, sent her method.

She says, "Have your lap full of carpet strips as you sit at the sewing machine. Lap two ends and sew. Lap the free end of one of these strips with an end of a new strip. Sew. Continue in an unending strip. Let the machine sew an inch of stitches in between. Then when you have quite a lot saved, cut the strips, leaving a half inch on each side. One can sew oads of strips in a short time. And that half inch of sewed thread stitches keeps the pieces from pulling apart."

Nancy wondered whether this method were one more triumph for technology!

How about doing some canning this year? Nancy has a leaflet on "Canning" which she will send on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write her care of The Atlanta Constitution.

(Copyright, 1933, for The Constitution.)

When Nancy told her club members how to clip one piece of carpet or rug material through a slit in another piece she had had many communications regarding rug making.

Some women said they never fastened their rag strip ends but just braided them in. That seemed rather dangerous to Nancy, for there is a great amount of wear and tear on a rug. The ends need to be fastened somehow, but what is the quickest and easiest method?

Some women wrote in to say that they always took an afternoon or two to sew carpet rugs. They put a pile of pieces on the floor beside them. Then armed with stout thread and strong needle they pieced ends together. They did this with a slight amount of overlapping. There were many, many pieces to be made. Each one called for a separate knot and separate fastening. After the pieces were sewed together they were wound into a ball.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

BY CAROLINE CHATFIELD

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

"You make a big mistake," said one friend to another not long ago, "in always telling people how good you are; if you are as good as you say you are, you will discover it and if you are not, they will lose confidence in you and refuse to credit you with what virtues you really have. This is a great deal about the art of painting. The rest of the party regarded her as a whiz and when puzzled about some point always referred the matter to her. But she met her Waterloo when later on an accomplished artist joined the group and showed her up as an impostor. She did not know the first principles of composition, design, light or shade, or the use of color.

Those that tell cock and bull stories in order to impress others with their heroic qualities are hardest to detect and to convict. They sweep us along on the current of their story to the very crest of the wave before we discover that the whole point and purpose of the yarn is to paint a picture of the story-teller's heroism. And it frequently happens that we have to hear a lot of these tales before we divine the intent of them.

The most pitiable and transparent form of boasting is that done by the people that continually run themselves down. They have their hearers by the ears. One cannot listen to them and remain silent without being impolite. One often cannot speak and be honest. For most of us politeness comes ahead of honesty and those that make derogatory remarks about themselves know this. There are three types of boasting which have been described as having a cellophane covering. Everybody can see beneath the cover.

"Show me a truly modest man," cried a sage, "and I shall look on a paragon of virtue and applaud him."

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

The Evils of Avarice.

BY ELY CULBERTSON,

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Greedy is an attribute of which most bridge players have an oversupply. If a hand can be defeated one trick immediately by cashing a high card, as a rule it is bad policy to refuse to take this card in the work within a short time. This trick too often a player will find himself unable to take the trick which he has preserved so carefully. The following hand is an example of this, and although it must be admitted that North and South had reached too high a contract, I believe they fully deserved to make it if only to punish East for his greediness.

Both sides vulnerable.

North East South West
1♥ Pass 1NT Pass
2♥ Pass 2NT Pass
3NT Pass Pass Pass

West opened the club 7, on which East played the Queen and Declarer the King. The outlook was not very hopeful but the Knave of hearts was laid down at West's feet. This trick was won with the King and the 5 of clubs returned. Declarer played the 8 and West won the trick with the 9. At this point the 3-spot was this, and although West, hoping that it was held by his partner, laid down the Ace. This established the Knave in Declarer's hand and gave him his hope of getting more tricks. West had no entry available to set up his last club. West now shifted to a spade, which was won by East with the Queen. At this point the defense had taken 4 tricks, so all East had to do in order to assure setting the contract was to cash his Ace of spades. However, he still held a stopper in hearts and hoped that his partner held some strength in diamonds. West refused to go up with one of his honors, hoping that the Declarer would win the trick with the 8-spot on the board and eventually have to lead either clubs or spades. South, however, was beginning to see a chance to make the hand and so went up with the Ace and returned the 9-spot to his own hand. Two more rounds of diamonds followed, after which the good Knave of clubs was played. The King of spades was discarded in Dummy and East was forced to discard either his Ace of spades or his heart protection. He was helpless as a result of his own avarice.

NEW YORK, June 23.—(P)—

Stocks rallied ambitiously in the late trading today, thus reversing yesterday's trend.

With wheat, oats and rye climbing to new highs on reports of extensive crop damage, wheat counted for an early afternoon siesta, and a market with many net gains of 1 to 4 points.

Despite this final spurt, the day's business totaled only 3,554,050 shares, smallest volume since May 23.

Thursday's sharp dip had no overnight repercussions, for the market opened higher. Its vitality on this upturn, however, was not apparent, as prices were back around the previous close. Dollar exchange was reasonably steady.

The late rise in stocks covered a broad list. Traders who had sold on Thursday's unsubstantiated rumor that France was leaving gold, were willing to repurchase and prices moved up with considerable velocity.

Case and National Distillers rallied 4 net. Chrysler led the motors with a 3-point appreciation which was matched by General Motors.

Western Union, Corn Products and Du Pont.

American Telephone, United States Steel, American Can, Sears Roebuck and International Harvester were up around 2 or more. Celanese, active, was 6 points higher.

The day was unproductive of financial news, apart from the boom in Chicago grains.

Second quarter income statements of the country's corporations will soon be appearing and it is generally granted that the improvement over three months and a year ago will be striking for many companies.

TRADE REVIEW NOTES

CONTINUED UPTURN

NEW YORK, June 23.—(P)—

Business in the past week continued its expansion, wholly unaffected by seasonal influences, said the Dun & Bradstreet Review.

Expected hesitancy from uncertainties regarding the application of commodity processing taxes, the agency asserted, was not apparent in manufacturing schedules built up generally above those of a week ago.

"The broadened sweep at which trade is now progressing," continued the review, "is eliciting a sentiment from even the most timorous veterans of industry as the sustained strength of the upswing has passed beyond the most sanguine expectations."

The further widening of employment and the continued rising trend of wages form the base of the larger buying power, the concrete evidence of which is reflected in the continued widening of distributive totals. Each week consumer demand is being extended to additional items, and as urgent needs for footwear and clothing are covered and unsaturated demand, interest becomes more centered on furniture, housefurnishings, radios, musical instruments and even jewelry.

Evidence of the operation of constructive factors built on the secure ground work which has been laid slowly during the last two years is furnished by the statistical exhibits of the major industries, which reveal not even a faint likelihood of the usual summer lull.

In Georgia's Fields and Streams

By H. A. CARTER.

CARPENTER-BEES. There is a species of bee that is common around Atlanta, which on first sight appears to be a large bumble-bee. It has the distinguishing mark of a white blaze on the face, and is properly called the carpenter-bee. This is one of the most appropriate names that I know of, for these insects are expert workers in wood.

I saw the first one this spring on the gate to my daughter's play yard. It was boring industriously into the side of some yellow pine, and had already made a sizeable hole when I discovered it. Not exactly relishing the idea of the insect frightening the baby, I killed this specimen and mounted it. Since then I have found six other nests near my house, and all of them are nearly completed.

These bees select a substantial piece of timber, such as a joist, and begin to gnaw into it across the grain. After they have penetrated for an inch and a half, they turn down the grain and continue to tunnel, until they have excavated a hole about half an inch in diameter and eight or nine inches long. After the tunnel is completed and cleaned, the eggs are laid in a single row, and each egg is sealed into a chamber to itself. Upon hatching, the larva feeds upon a ball of "bee-bread" and transforms through the rest of its life-cycle in that cell, but often at wide intervals. I have opened a number of these deserted nests, but I have never seen any evidence of an individual that did not complete the life history.

One thing about these insects is that they always choose sound timber and never attempt to work in soft or rotten wood. This fact makes it imperative that all nests should be sprayed inside with creosote and plugged to keep the timber in good condition. This is rather less expensive than replacing an entire joist later. The nesting sites are almost always exposed to the weather, which hastens the possibility of damage to the timber. Look about the eaves of your house for small holes, and watch them closely. You may find a few uninvited tenants in your house. Let the brood emerge, and then follow the treatment just mentioned.

Note: Another article by Mr. Carter will appear in this paper on Monday.

RULE IS AMENDED TO PERMIT BLIND TO SELL IN P. O.

The blind of Atlanta will benefit directly from results of "the new deal," according to announcement from Washington Friday which said that the rigid rule against selling articles in federal buildings has been amended to permit blind persons to dispose of pencils and newspapers. The change was said to be a result of an appeal to President Roosevelt by societies interested in assisting the blind.

J. T. McGrath, president of the Fifth District Chapter, Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind, said that immediate steps would be taken to arrange for blind salesmen and saleswomen to solicit in the postoffice building. Paul Donohoe, well-known blind corner of Fulton county, said the new rule would open up new avenues of work for blind persons. Under the rules, no blind person may establish a stand in federal buildings, but he or she may engage in sales work in the corridors with no more pencils and newspapers than they are able to carry in their arms. If they take a stool into the building, it must be removed each night. Local societies will be expected to assist in selecting a limited number of blind salesmen.

Self Preservation Is Assured By the Safeguard of Insurance

"Self-preservation is the first law of nature," and it is not at all a bad law. Everyone would do well to protect himself and family as fully as possible and at the same time safeguard the welfare of those who are dependent upon him.

Are you protected against the ever-mounting risk of traffic accidents sweeping the country? Is your income guarded against abrupt halt and your family's future assured? If not, remember that The Constitution offers you travel and pedestrian accident protection.

The insurance offered you through The Atlanta Constitution is issued by the North American Accident Insurance Company, of Chicago, Ill. This company, during the last several years, has paid to Constitution subscribers and members of their families over $160,000.

The insurance is offered to subscribers and immediate dependent members of a subscriber's family between the ages of 15 and 68 on the one subscription going into the home at the small registration fee of 20 cents with ap-
